

American Coal Ash Association Programs to Advance the Management and Use of Coal Combustion Products (CCPs)

Barry R. Stewart¹, Samuel S. Tyson¹

¹American Coal Ash Association, 2760 Eisenhower Ave, Suite 304, Alexandria, VA 22314

KEYWORDS: trade association, education, government agency

ABSTRACT

Since its founding in 1968 the American Coal Ash Association (ACAA) has worked to advance the management and use of coal combustion products (CCPs) in ways that are technically sound, commercially competitive and environmentally safe. ACAA is the trade association of the coal ash industry, and its members are producers of CCPs, marketers of CCPs, and other organizations with interests in CCPs. This paper will highlight the many ACAA programs that are being used to accomplish this goal.